JOURNAL WRITING IN AN ELEMENTARY MATH CLASSROOM AND ITS EFFECT ON STUDENTS' UNDERSTANDING OF DECIMALS

This is an exploratory, action research study of the use of journal writing, focused on four students in a regular grade five math class and their growing understanding of decimals. They were given journal assignments as well as oral and manipulative-based activities during a series of ten, forty minute lessons. Data collection methods included field notes, audio taped student-student and teacher-student interaction, and written journal entries. The findings of the study indicate that students' use of journal writing, in conjunction with other constructivist tools such as manipulative-based activities, significantly improved: their conceptual understanding of decimals; their ability to work through to solutions not previously understood; their ability to consolidate learning initiated through other methods; their awareness of their own understanding; their confidence; and their ownership of their learning. Students' journal entries allowed me, the researcher, to programme and assess students' needs quickly and consistently.

HOW TO TEACH NATURE JOURNALING

A SCIENCE AND ART MANUAL FOR PARENTS, EDUCATORS, AND NATURALISTS

Heyday Books Expanding on the philosophy and methods of The Laws Guide to Nature Drawing and Journaling, John Muir Laws and Emilie Lygren have developed the first-ever comprehensive book devoted to helping educators use nature journaling as an inspiring teaching tool to engage young people with wild places. In their workshops Laws and Lygren are often asked the how-tos of teaching nature journaling: how to manage student groups in the outdoors, teach drawing skills (especially from those who profess to have none), connect journaling to educational standards, and incorporate journaling into longer lessons. This book puts together curriculum plans, advice, and in-the-field experience so that educators of all stripes can leap into journaling with their students. The approaches are designed to work in a range of ecosystems and settings, and are suitable for classroom teachers, outdoor educators, camp counselors, and homeschooling parents. Full-color illustrations and sample journal pages from notable naturalists show how to put each lesson into practice. Field-tested by over a hundred educators, this book includes dozens of activities that easily support the Common Core and the Next Generation Science Standards--and, just as important, it will show kids and mentors alike how to recognize the wonder and intrigue in their midst.

UNJOURNALING

DAILY WRITING EXERCISES THAT ARE NOT PERSONAL, NOT INTROSPECTIVE, NOT BORING!

Routledge Some students just don't want to share intimate details about their thoughts, feelings and lives—at least, not with others in a class or group. That's where Unjournaling comes in. All the writing prompts in this book are entirely impersonal but completely engaging for both kids and adults. Two examples of the 200 writing prompts include: Write a paragraph about a girl named Dot, but use no letters with a dot (in other words, no i or j). Why on earth would Yankee Doodle stick a feather in his cap and call it "macaroni"? Come up with a plausible explanation. The book includes sample responses to all of the questions—a helpful tool for anyone who gets stuck with a topic and wants to see how it can be done! Grade 7-Adult

KEEPING A NATURE JOURNAL

DISCOVER A WHOLE NEW WAY OF SEEING THE WORLD AROUND YOU

Storey Publishing From the day it was released in 2000, Keeping a Nature Journal has struck a profound chord among professional, casual, and occasional naturalists of all ages. In response to this groundswell of enthusiasm, we have revised KEEPING A NATURE JOURNAL, updated the interior design, and created a new cover. Undoubtedly the most exciting new element in this second edition is a portfolio of 32 illustrated pages from Clare Walker Leslie's most recent journals, reproduced in full color. What makes KEEPING A NATURE JOURNAL so popular? It is inspiring and easy to use. Clare and co-author Charles Chuck E. Roth offer simple techniques to give first-time journal-keepers the confidence to go outside, observe the natural world, and sketch and write about what they see. At the same time, they motivate long-time journal-keepers to hone their powers of observation as they immerse themselves in the mysteries of the natural world. Clare and Chuck stress that the journal is a personal record of daily experience and the world around us. Nature's beauty can be observed everywhere, whether in the city, suburbs, or country.

A STUDY OF AN EXPLORATION OF REFLECTIVE PRACTICE THROUGH JOURNAL WRITING FOR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL PRINCIPALS

This was a qualitative study conducted to investigate whether personal reflection through journal keeping is a technique that promotes reflective practice. Ten techniques for journal keeping, culled from the literature of process writing and journal keeping, were presented to six elementary school principals who kept journals for four months and responded to a four-part interview on their journal keeping experience. The journals were analyzed through the framework of Schon's reflective practice, a process of reflective conversation with the situation of concern. The interviews were used to support the data from the journal entries. This study aimed to describe the virtual world of journal keeping as a technique for reflective practice. The findings indicated that the six journal keepers engaged in the process of journal keeping in six different ways, with each journal keeper experiencing personal reflection as well as periods of reflective practice. Although a few experimented somewhat with the journal writing techniques and others simply reviewed and rejected them, there seemed to be so little attention to the journal writing techniques that they did not influence the extent to which the journal keepers were able to create personal reflections that lead to reflective practice. Although the subjects valued reflective practice and journal keeping, they valued reflective practice to a greater extent than they valued journal keeping. Journal writing promotes reflective practice in different ways for different journal keepers. Qualities such as voice, sense of mission and topic selection help determine the journal keepers' serious stance toward journal writing which governs the extent to which journal writing can access reflective practice for the principal. Journal keeping is an introspective, synthesizing tool which allows for the application of experience and knowledge. Journaling techniques may increase the power of experience, but are not mandatory for achieving reflective practice. The value of reflective practice is meaning that emerges when the journal writer draws upon his or her own resources to reframe a situation and create a new order.

Throughout the book, student work samples and classr
